Problem: install file for a Mac app will not download. error 500. The Web server lists the directory contents and the file appears to be missing. We called the vendor and explained the issue and what we found in a message. They called back and acknowledged the issue and promised resolution and help with installing the app.

The new version of the application we worked on on 3/9 will not install with Mac OS's current installation permissions. We changed the permissions to it would install. The application would not install with the current OS version, so we started an OS upgrade. Fred was going out of town in an hr or two, and needed to prepare, so I left to allow him to continue that.
